Template(s) to Page Attachments

This section will list every page in the system, and show the current template file attachment for that page. Click the Edit button on any row to edit the template attachment(s) for that page.

Page Column

Default Template Attached column

This column displays the main template attached for that page. This is the template that is used if there is no language-specific or category-specific template attachment specific for the language/category currently being used/viewed. In other words this is the "catch all" template attachment if no other template attachments for that particular page apply.

Next to the template file, in [brackets] it will list every template set that the template was found in (within Template Set \(Admin Editing\) listed template set(s) only). For convenience, you can click on any of the listed template sets to go directly to the page to view/edit the contents of that template in that template set. The template sets listed are done so in the order that the system would naturally be "looking" for them, so the first template set listed would be the one that the template is used from²⁾.

<tip c n>Note: An attachment setting only specifies the "local" template file that will be used as the template to display that page, the actual template set is not specified in the attachment setting. That is why it lists all of the template sets that each template file is found in.</tip>

Template(s) to Addon Page Attachments

If you currently have any addons that have their own pages, such as the Storefront Addon, this section will list all of the template attachments for those addon pages.

Click the Edit button next to any of the addon pages to edit that page's template attachments.

Addon column

This column lists the addon's name, as it is listed under Addons > Manage Addons.

This is the addon page name. If it is not clear what a particular page is used for by the page name, consult the addon's documentation or ask the addon's author.

Additional Storefront Template Options For Your Storefront Clients

You can provide a choice of storefront templates to choose from for your storefront clients by assigning multiple templates to the storefront home page as described above. The name of the template choice on the client side will be the actual name of the template file you assign.
